

Heather Gingras
Science Teacher

Mrs. Heather Gingras majored in biology at the College of William and Mary in Virginia. She returned to William and Mary to complete the coursework for certification in secondary education in biology. She has had the good fortune to spend her entire educational career in Catholic schools. She has relocated multiple times for her husband's career.

She taught high school chemistry and physical science in New Jersey. She taught middle school math and science in both Florida and South Carolina before relocating to Utah. Her children have all attended Catholic schools and she values the sense of community that Catholic schools provide, both as a parent and an educator. She appreciates the opportunity to be a part of St Francis Xavier.
